

Puja rani has been teaching in the Department of Political Science, Gargi College, University of Delhi since July, 2006. She specializes in teaching political theory, western political thought and conflict resolution and peace building. Her research interest includes inquiring concerns of gender equality in issues of inheritance, land rights, political representation, justice, and labour. She has completed her M. Phil on women's empowerment through political representation at the grassroot level. Her doctoral research is on the issue of women land rights. She has presented papers on these issues in several national and international conferences and has also published in research journals and news dailies.

Before starting her teaching career, she has also worked with non-governmental sector on the issues of gender equality. Currently, she is also an honorary advisor to the North East Development Foundation, which works towards sustainable and targeted development in North East India by taking timely and qualitative interventions in various development activities through partnerships with likeminded institutions, organizations, government agencies leading to sustainable outcomes. She is also a member of the University Women's Association of Delhi, New Delhi.